PGY1 Pharmacy Resident

Education: Belmont University College of Pharmacy

About Me: Originally from Bristol, a small town in East Tennessee, I moved to Nashville where I attended Belmont University for my undergraduate studies and to earn my PharmD. It was during my fourth year of pharmacy school that I realized what I enjoyed most was engaging in patient care alongside other healthcare professionals. More specifically, I found the academic medical center setting to be the most rewarding, where you are presented with unique patient cases and pushed to implement, and engage with, the most current recommendations from your area of practice every day. After attending ASHP Midyear and interviewing with UofL Health, I knew this program would provide me with just that kind of environment plus so much more. With the incredibly supportive staff as well as offering rotational opportunities in my interest areas including oncology, ambulatory care, and internal medicine, UofL Health will provide me with an exceptional PGY1 experience. Outside of pharmacy, you can find me at Cherokee Park, trying new restaurants, or exploring Louisville with my coresidents!

Education: Sullivan University College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences

About Me: I am originally from Evansville, Indiana, but moved to Louisville to complete my undergraduate education at the University of Louisville. Since then, Louisville has become "home" as I have stayed to complete my pharmacy education and am now beginning my pharmacist career here! When considering residency programs, UofL Health appealed to me as I desired a program with a variety of rotation experiences and a variety of experienced preceptors. Completing APPE rotations at UofL further solidified my interest as the hospital's emphasis on teaching and working in interprofessional teams inspired me to grow as a clinician. Currently, I am interested in oncology and infectious diseases, but I look forward to learning about a variety of clinical specialties this year. Outside of pharmacy, I enjoy baking (cookies are my specialty), running, and spending time with my husband and our two cats.

Jackson Hull, PharmD
PGY1 Pharmacy Resident

Education: Doctor of Pharmacy-University of Kentucky College of Pharmacy; Master of Public Administration-University of Kentucky Martin School of Public Policy and Administration; Bachelor of Science-Western Kentucky University

About Me: I am originally from Louisville, KY and have lived in Kentucky for my entire life. I earned my B.S. in Chemistry from Western Kentucky University and earned my PharmD from the University of Kentucky College of Pharmacy. My experience as an intern at the Lexington VA Medical Center led to my interest in pursuing PGY-1 residency training. When looking for a residency program, I sought out academic medical centers that had opportunities for teaching, research and PGY2 training. UofL Health offered all these opportunities and much more. My current areas of interest include oncology and infectious diseases. Outside of pharmacy, I enjoy playing golf, woodworking, and cooking!

Hannah Hunt, PharmD
PGY1 Pharmacy Resident

Education: University of Tennessee Health Science Center College of Pharmacy

About Me: I am originally from San Diego, California; however, I moved around a lot growing up due to my dad serving in the Navy. I attended the University of Tennessee in Knoxville for undergrad and completed their 3+1 program, allowing me to go to the UTHSC College of Pharmacy in Memphis. My current interest areas include emergency medicine and infectious disease. I am excited to continue my pharmacy training at UofL Health due to the friendly environment and variety of elective rotations available. I'm especially excited about the antimicrobial stewardship opportunities and gaining experience in a level one trauma center. Outside of pharmacy I enjoy reading, working out, and watching movies with my cat, Walter!

Education: East Tennessee State University Bill Gatton College of Pharmacy

About Me: I grew up in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, then earned my B.S in Chemistry from Lee University and my PharmD from East Tennessee State University Bill Gatton College of Pharmacy. I chose UofL Health because of the large variety of rotations, the academic setting, and the mentoring program. I'm excited to dive deeper into the world of pharmacy and work with all the amazing people here. My current interests include specialty pharmacy, oncology, and diabetes management. In my free time, I love to read, travel, and hang out with friends.

Education: University of Tennessee Health Science Center College of Pharmacy

About Me: I am from Knoxville, TN, where I attended the University of Tennessee to earn my Bachelor of Science in Pre-Professional Studies and my Doctor of Pharmacy. While in school, I worked as a pharmacy intern at East Tennessee Children's Hospital to help further my clinical experience and knowledge. Three aspects were essential to me when choosing a residency program. First, I wanted a program affiliated with both an academic medical center and a community hospital. With these two affiliations, not only would I constantly be in an environment that encouraged lifelong, layered learning, but I would also learn how to be an effective and competent pharmacist in two different settings. Second, I wanted a program with a variety of opportunities in ambulatory care, for it is one of my primary interests. UofL is heavily rooted in ambulatory care and will provide me with robust rotation experiences to deepen my knowledge in this area. Lastly, I wanted a program where the people were inviting and supportive. UofL was able to provide in all three of these areas, along with a variety of rotation experiences and incredible preceptors, which is why I am ecstatic to be completing my PGY-1 pharmacy residency at UofL Health. Currently, my clinical interests include ambulatory care, cardiology, and internal medicine. Outside of pharmacy, I love to play the guitar, go rock climbing, and spend time with my dog, Kona, and my husband!

Education: Lipscomb University College of Pharmacy

About Me: I am originally from Atlanta, GA, and I attended Young Harris College to play collegiate baseball and complete my undergraduate studies. I then moved to Nashville, TN to earn my PharmD from Lipscomb University College of Pharmacy during which I developed a passion for patient care, clinical pharmacy, and clinical research. UofL Health was a standout program during my residency search because of the wide variety of the clinical rotations, supportive atmosphere, and success of previous residents in the program. My current interests are oncology and critical care. Outside of pharmacy, I like to play golf, watch sports, and explore Louisville with my co-residents.

PGY1 Pharmacy Resident

Education: Sullivan University College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences

About Me: I am originally from Ashland, a small town in Eastern Kentucky, and completed my undergraduate studies at Morehead State University. I then moved to Louisville to obtain my PharmD at Sullivan University College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences. During pharmacy school I had the opportunity to complete multiple rotations at UofL and was instantly drawn to the diverse patient population and extensive interprofessional opportunities. As an academic medical center with multiple outpatient clinics and a growing oncology center, UofL aligns with my clinical interests of internal medicine, ambulatory care, and oncology. Outside of pharmacy, I enjoy anything true crime or Harry Potter, weightlifting, and exploring Louisville with my husband and two schnauzers (Hudson and Chief).
